This historic book may have numerous typos, missing text or index. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. 1919. Not illustrated. Excerpt: ... FINDING A NEW WORLD (For October 12 -- Columbus Day) Did you ever find something nice when you were not looking for it? Did you ever hunt for one thing and find something else that was better? I am going to tell you a story about a man who once found something when he was hunting for something else. This man was a brave sailor. He lived on the other side of the ocean, long ago. His name was Christopher -- Christopher Columbus. That is a long name, but I think you can remember it. Let us all say it loud, together -- "Christopher Columbus!" If I tell you what Christopher means you can remember it better. All names, you know, once meant something. Christopher means "Christ-bearer." Columbus's father and mother were Christian people. They wanted their baby boy to grow up to be a good man, so they gave him a good name. Christopher is a good name. When Christopher Columbus was a boy he used to watch the ships that came to his town. He lived in a town beside the sea. He wondered where the ships came from, and what they brought to his town. When they sailed out of the harbor he wondered what they were carrying away, and where they were going. Often he talked with the sailors who lived on the ships. They told him many stories that pleased him. He said: "I'm going to be a sailor, too." And he did become a sailor. Even before he was a man he was working on the ships and sailing here and there. Once the ship on which he was sailing took fire, and Columbus, with some other sailors, had to get down into the water. He swam and swam, till finally he got to the shore. It is said that he swam six miles that time; but I think he must have had a plank or something of the kind that kept him from sinking. Before Columbus was a man the Turks captured a big city in the East and would n...
