Cherry Mercer has a degree in biology, but due to the crappy economy, she finds herself working at Pete's Ice Cream Parlor. As far as jobs go, it isn't that bad. It enables her to pay back her student loans while indulging her love of soft serve. In her wildest dreams, she never imagines the decadent chocolate and vanilla swirl can get her into so much trouble with the law. When she runs into Officer Zane Barrett, her whole world is turned upside down. He's as hot as the day is long. And even though a gal can't be arrested for what she's thinking, Cherry still finds herself being hauled downtown.

Zane Barrett—a seventeen-year veteran of the police force—spends his days serving and protecting his community. He lives in a nice house, loves his job and spends his spare time with his partner, Knox, and his wife Sadie. Despite Knox's badgering, Zane insists he isn't lonely and doesn't feel the need to actively look for "Miss Right." In fact, his philosophy is: Not everyone's meant for love and marriage. But once he crosses paths with Cherry Mercer, he quickly realizes his philosophy has more holes than a firing range target. Unfortunately, Cherry has erected some emotional walls that could prove to be impenetrable. Zane offers her an irresistible proposition intended to tear down those carefully constructed barriers. The question is, will Cherry take the bait and give both of them a chance for a happily ever after?
