Eva Martinez isn't sure why she's pursuing a master's degree in religious studies, except that something about the material resonates in the depths of her soul. But when her dreams start to be invaded by lost gardens, forbidden fruit, and a strangely familiar mystery man, even she has to wonder if she's taking her schoolwork too seriously. Then Eva starts to notice the strangeness seeping into everyday life. The man from her dreams is real and Eva feels a curious connection with him. Her classmate, someone she's known for years, starts to act increasingly volatile. And it seems like everyone, including her bosses, is keeping secrets...secrets that have something to do with her. Eva's determined to find out what's going on, how it involves her, and why she's transforming into someone buried deep in her memories. The deeper in that Eva gets, the more she feels like she should understand what's happening around her. The secrets conceal real dangers, and if she can't untangle them and find the truth in time, she--and all those she's come to care for--will face defeat at the hands of an ancient enemy, one who recognized Eva long before she learned to recognize herself.
