Kevin Priced has never had a Flying Birthday before, soaring in the sky without a broom on his birthday. He has never seen a Haloed Tower, never conjured a Cloudbank on his friends, and never entered an Infleks Building before.

He has been too busy watching his father disappear when he was five, his mother die mysteriously when he was nine, and his grandmother die when he was sixteen. Kevin, a nineteen-year-old now, lives by himself in his grandmother's house next to his closest friends, Molly and Yasmine, whom he cherishes most in the world . . .

But his shaky world becomes shakier still when yet another disaster strikes: Molly is infected with an enigmatic disease and would soon die, and to save her they go with her into this incredible other side of the world that Kevin – and anyone who reads about him – will find unforgettable.

For it's there that he finds not only new friends, love and wisdom, and a mythic creature beyond all proportions, but how his parents died and just how special he really is.
